

Designed with a detective motif, World History-Based Writing with Literature sets students on the trail of writing well as they learn world history! Live and interactive, this online class features all nine units of IEW’s Structure and Style™ methodology paired with world history source texts and contextualized grammar and editing instruction. Under the guidance of the infamous Detective Sherlock Hemlock, students examine historical topics and trends from Johann Gutenberg and his printing press to Mark Zuckerberg and his social networking website, Facebook. Further, Detective Hemlock hones students’ understanding of the ideas communicated in age appropriate novels that correspond with the historical topics and people under investigation. Focusing on the author’s craft, students learn a strategic method of literary analysis that allows them to discern what an author is saying and determine whether it is true.

Students in World History-Based Writing with Literature participate in a private virtual classroom in which they can hear and see each other as accredited IEW Instructor, Ericka McClelland guides them through their weekly language investigations. With Detective Sherlock Hemlock at the helm, students are equipped to approach language arts confidently and exercise the art of language competently... all while developing a global perspective of world history!

Additional Topics Covered: Banned Words, Dress-Up & Sentence Openers Review, Decorations, Triples/Advanced, Vocabulary, MLA Format, Citations, Annotation, Text-based Responses, Persuasive & Argumentative Writing, and Socratic Discussion.
